WALES HISTORICAL SOCIETY 2013 BARN CALENDAR

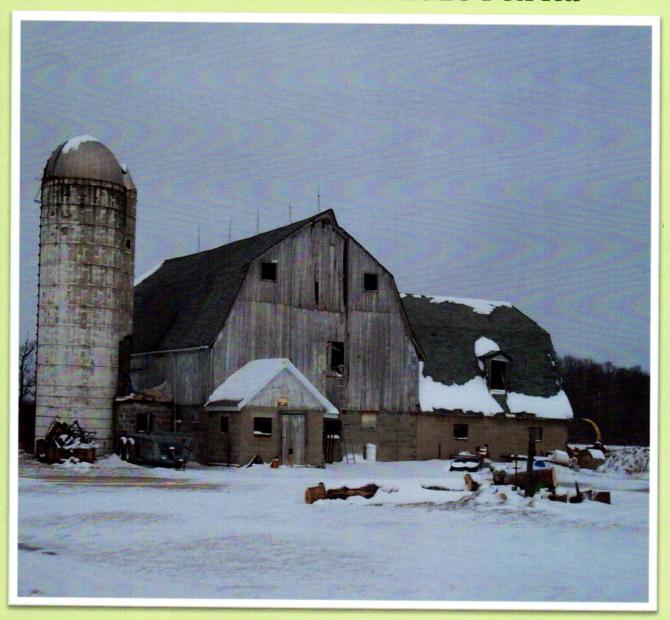

Golembieski Farm

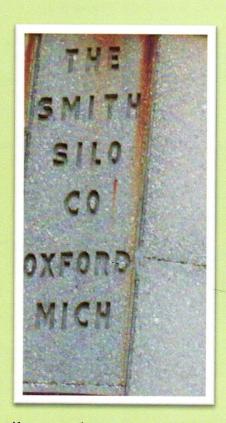

This aerial view of the Golembieski farm is an example of how a working farm looks. Each farm looks different from another because every farm family has different needs. As you can see there are many other buildings beside the barn that are necessary. The barn no matter what style seems to be the focal point of the farm, each barn being as individual as its owners.

Golembieski Barn at 2018 Fox Rd

The Scott Barn & Silo Alpine and Wales Ridge Road

Farm silos, used to store agricultural goods, were made of wood up to the year 1909. In 1907 Hiram Smith had patented a concrete silo, the first of its kind. This sort of silo would be much more expensive due to the material it was constructed from, but was also more durable, less likely to give in to the elements and fire. The very first one actually produced by his Smith Silo Company (of Paw Paw, later Oxford, Michigan) was constructed in 1909 in Paw Paw, which is southwest of Kalamazoo.

Wales Township Barns

Cove Road Barn

Sparling Road Barn

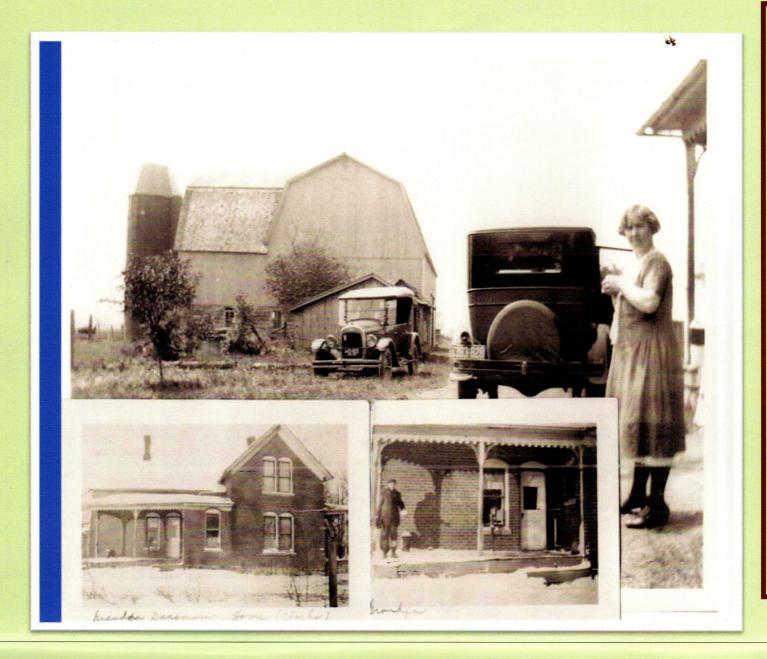

Somma Barn

These Wales Township barns have the distinctive style of having dormers or windows in the roof. One builder who used that style was Herman Short. Fortunately two of the barns remain standing today. The barn in sec 9 was taken down due to age.

Cove Barn at 9319 Sparling Road

This was Sam and Stella Cove's barn, which is now owned by Sally Dove. Sam's son, Emerson Cove purchased and dismantled the shorter silo from a farm in Romeo. He then rebuilt it on the farm at Sparling Rd. Having more than one silo allowed farmers to keep more livestock fed through the winter.

Torello Barn at 1084 Palms Road

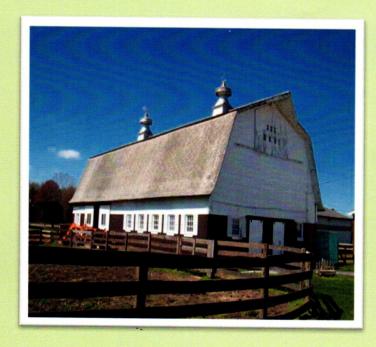

Granary with root cellar under structure

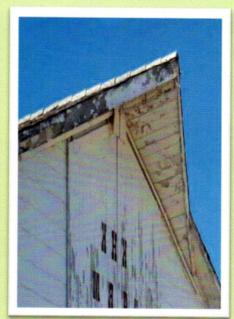

The Martino Torello barn is located on Palms north of Ravenswood. Martino's father bought the property in 1936. The barn was old then, with the original shake roof in disrepair. The granary above the root cellar is unique to the area. A root cellar is a structure built underground or partially underground which is used to store root vegetables, fruits, & beverages such as apple cider.

Muhsam Barn at Yager Road

The Muhsam barn is a fine example of the Gambrel roof. The gambrel, or two slope gable roof began to be used after the Civil War. Also known as the curb roof, the double slope permitted a larger capacity hayloft without increasing the height of the side walls.
